CLUBS FORMED ALL OVER THE COUNTRY

CRICAGO, July 27 .- "A revolution in the Island of Cuba is likely to take place at any moment," said R. G. Socorro, who was until recently Secretary of the Council of Presidents of Cuban clubs at Key West. "We Cubaus want to vie with Chicago in the celebration of the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America, and our contribution will be to add another free republic to the continent which Columbus discovered. Much blood will likely flow in the island before the end of the year, as we intend to fly the Cuban flag from Morro Castle in the port of Havana by the time the anniversary comes

"The state of affairs in Cuba is ripe for a revolution. The discontent is general by reason of the Government's exactions. Spain is a poor nation to pay its debts, and all the debts it has contracted within the last century it is taking out of Cuba. It has too many men who have to be supported in office, and when it cannot do better it sends them to Cuba. These carpetbaggers, as you would call them in America, know that the first change in Government at home will throw them out; so while their tenure of office lasts they try to wring as much as possible out of the people. The Cubans have to submit to the domination of a race inferior to themselves or emigrate. But whether they remain at bome or leave they are still resolved to put down this oppres sion of their country. This feeling is general throughout Cuba and an outbreak may be expected at any time.

Patriotism of the Cubaus.

"The Cubans in this country are all patriots. They love their own land, like the Irish. They are eager to fight, and the greatest difficulty is to restrain them from making some premature demonstration that would result disastrously to the cause. That is the task which confronts the leaders in America of the movement for Cuban freedom-to repress it temporarily, not to stimulate it. "Fortunately we have at the head of the revolutionary party a man, Josepe Marti, who possesses the necessary prudence. He is also a patriot. His boyhood shows this. When only 12 years old he and a schoolmate named Valdes Dominguez were implicated in writing an essay advocating Cuban inde-pendence. They were reported to the civil authorities and arrested. Seeing that they might become liable to imprisonment and perhaps death, Josepe Marti avowed him-self alone responsible to save his school-mates. He was put in the chain gang and compelled to work in the streets of Havana in irons. Then he was sent to Spain and apprenticed to a lawyer. He was admitted to the bar, but took the first opportunity to leave Spain and come to the United States. He has lived and is loved in many South

"He was the American Consul in New York of the Argentine Republic and other countries of South America October 10, 1891, when the anniversary of the outbreak of the last Cuban revolution occurred. At a meeting to celebrate the event he spoke in favor of Cuban independence. A Spanish paper censured him as the representative of countries friendly to Spain encouraging one of her dependencies to rebel. Marti immediately resigned all his consulates, and, being without other means of support, he has since supported himself as a teacher of the Spanish language. He devotes his evenings to instruction, his days to the

"The meeting in New York and Marti's speech stirred up his countrymen in America. Clubs began to be organized in Key West, Tampa, New York and other cities. Interest in the cause has lately been much stimulated by the appearance in Tampa two months ago of another Cuban patriot, but not a native—General Charles Rolloff. Gen-eral Rolloff was born in Poland, but went to Cuba when quite young and engaged in the war for independence of 1868. His abilities as a soldier raised him to the rank of Gen eral. He was in command of the largest force the insurgents raised in the war at the invasion of Los Villar, when with 13,000 men he conducted a successful campaign.
"General Rolloff was in the United States of Colombia when he heard that the ltevolutionary party was forming in this country two months ago. He at once repaired to Tampa and communicated with Marti, who had been elected its President. and aided in reorganizing it.

"When he came there were 17 Cuban societies there. The number soon increased to 40. Now Key West is so well organ-ized that every Cuban there belongs to one or more clubs, and every cigar factory is a

"Every place that has 20 Cubans is entitled to organize as a Cuban club. The Presidents of the different clubs in a town form a Council of Presidents, which cises supervision over the action of all members and keeps on the lookout for traitors. The objects of the clubs are the spreading of propaganda, the purchase of arms and munitions of war, the enlistment of men and the preparation for an outbreak at a moment's notice. Every member of a club is under the control of the Revolutionary party. There are no dissentients, but they stand solid to a man. "With a leader like Marti, a man of his experience, education and capabilities, it is not to be expected that a foolhardy attempt will be made to achieve independence. He will not consent to a useless sacrifice of life such as took place in the long war of 1868-78. We fought ten long years then and failed. Whatever is done this time will be done intelligently and in perfect accord with the patriots in Cuba. President Martinia in constant companies. dent Marti is in constant communication with all the revolutionary clubs, both in the United States and the rest of the continent as well as clubs formed on the island. A he is waiting for now is to hear the word.

Rendy to Take Up Arms Again. "We didn't want to force a revolution. Both in Cuba and the United States all the leading Cubans who survived the last war are ready to take up arms again. In Tampa, Key West and New York together there are 1,500 men ready to sail for Cuba at the word of command. Even the women have formed clubs in Key West and at Tampa a Woman's Revo-lationary Club is forming. We expect that the American people will aid us in the strug-gle for independence. It seems a shame that the whole body of the Ameri-can continent should be free and Cuba and the other West Indies remain colonies of European governments. In spite of the Monroe Joctrine, Cuba is a dependency Cuba does not desire to become a State of the American Union. Cubans admire the United States, but desire to become an independent country above all. They will, no doubt, like to have this country as their protector and guide in the first few years of her independence."

Mr. Socorro spoke of the services of others, but dwelt little on what he had had to do in the cause. Yet he was connected with the celebrated Virginius affair of 1873, being one of the 180 Cuban patriots who were taken with the ship by the Spaniards. Of the captured, 53 had been executed and the same iste awaited the rest when the United States stepped in and compelled the Spanish Government to respect the flag under which the Virginius sailed.

There is a club in Chicago, of which R. Vidal is president. It has 25 members—about half the entire Cuban colony here—not counting women and children. Regular meetings are held twice a month. Many of them are married, so would not be of them are married, so would not be likely to go to war. Within a short time all the Cubans here will, it is expected, be members of the club.

Samuel Brown Wylie Black, familiarly known as "Sam Black," was born on the "Hill," as it was called in early times, at what is now the northeast corner of Wylie avenue and Congress street. The whole square down to Washington street was known as "Black's orchard." In boyhood "Sam" was distinguished, being quick in temper, rash and somewhat unruly in social life and quite a trial to his theological father John Black, D. D. He was educated at the Western University, then situated on the north side of Cherry alley, be tween Second and Third streets, his father, Dr. Black, and the Rev. daring courage. His first movement in military life was in joining the Duquesne Greys, the crack military company of the city, first under the command of Col. He was sometimes accredited with loose views in morality and religion. Nothing could be more false. He was a sincer and earnest believer in the theology and religious belief which his eminent father had proclaimed from the pulpit for more than 50 years.

He came to the bar of Pittsburg at a time when it was eminent for brilliancy and power. W. W. Fetterman, John D. Mahon, W. W. Irwin, Cornelius Darragh, Wilson McCandless, A. W. In his practice at the bar he was ready, witty and full of that desperate resolve that wins cases without much logic or fact to sustain the verdict.

In old Quarter Sessions more than 50 years ago a prisoner was brought from jail to the courtroom for trial. He had no counsel. The Judge assigned Sam Black to defend him, saying they could retire and consult, that the counsel might advise his client. They retired. ### THE COST OF LIVING

Compared Between Protected America and Free Trade England.

CLOTHING CHEAP BUT FIT BADLY

Food Is More Expensive in Albion, but House Rents Not So High.

A topic of never-failing interest on both sides of the Atlantic is the relative cost of living in England and the United States. The English press, always ready with an opinion on this subject, has been discussing it for some days with an assiduity which, in view of the impending campaign, is somewhat suspicious, writes a London corre-spondent to the Philadelphia Press.

BRITONS FORCED TO BE VERY SAVING

There has been published recently a re-port from the British Consul at Chicago on wages and the cost of living in the States of what we know as the Middle West. Whether this report was timed by the authorities here so as to make its appearance just before the election, we do not know, but it has unquestionably been used for election purposes.

It is held forth as a sort of soothing syrup for the disturbed spirits of those classes who have come out lately into their political heritage, and who, from the recklessness of new found freedom and the desperation engendered by long years of oppression, have threatened to upnet things in this staid, old land, both politically and socially. To adapt such a report to a purpose like this has not been easy, and we can hardly be-lieve the undertaking has been successful.

Larger Wages in America Admitted. Not having read the report in full, we refrain from adverse criticism upon it. But to the conclusions drawn from it in British newspapers we can do no otherwise than to dissent in the most emphatic terms. We cannot believe, in the first place, that such inferences are warranted by the report itself. Indeed, from what we have read of it, we know they are not; and even though, by any possibility, the statement of a British Consul should be found to justify them, we are positively certain that these opinions would find no countenance in the true facts of the

It is admitted in the comments of the press that wages in the United States are far, very far, in advance of what is paid in England. It is even conceded that in some branches of industry the average earnings of branches of industry the average earnings of the American worker will amount per week to double the sum pocketed by workers in the same line over here. But the cost of living—there's the rub, they tell us, and their assumption is that the relative differ-ence in this respect is fully enough, if not more than enough, to make up in England's favor for the relative difference shown in the ways sheets of the two countries.

the wage sheets of the two countries.

This position is taken and strenuously maintained by every English paper that has fallen under our notice since the matter came up for special discussion, and it will certainly be through no want of pleading on the part of ponderous British editors it this notion is not crammed down the throats of the British public.

An English Warning to Emigrants. One paper, an influential London daily, warns those who are thinking of emigrating to the United States to look before they leap, and its warnings are emphasized by the astounding observation that "bad as is the condition of the British workmen, we think that he is much better off than his brother in America." Now, what we propose to combat in this letter is the assumption, which we hold to be altogether baseless, that living in England is so much cheaper than it is with us, and, discarding the details for the present, we shall offer only a few cursory observa-tions upon this point. If workmen can buy their necessaries at so low a cost as is claimed, it will surely transpire that living in general can be conducted at a low rate, for it is inconceivable that the general public would put up with prices which were out of proportion altogether to those paid for the same articles by the daily laborer. What then are the facts?

As regards the cost of things to the average resident one sees at once how far-fetched is this idea of cheapness if he only looks at the two items of railway and hotel rates. To travel on the English railways in a style at all comparable with that afforded mour American cars, you must travel first-

English Railway Travel Uncomfortable Even then you will get no conveniences, beyond that of a fairly comfortable seat, and the rate will be 4 cents a mile. Secondclass costs about the same as the American first-class, that is, 3 cents a mile. Of course, you can take a third-class ticket if you like, which will cost a cent per mile less than this. But your standing is impeached by riding third while others are riding firstclass on the same train. You will "get there" just as soon, but you will neither be se comfortable in body nor so happy in

At first-class hotels in large towns you will be entertained, of course, on the European plan. The lowest price for a fairly good room will be 4 and 6, with 1 and 6 for attendance. This means $1 50, and if afterward you fee the many persons for whose attentions you are supposed to have paid, but have not, in the extra 1 and 6, it will mean $2. Your meals you can take where you please. But it will be a poor meal of any kind, and poorly served, which you will get for less than 50 cents, barring, of course, the English tea, and here again any will have to don? you will have to drop 2 pence for the waiter each time. So that even when you have saved all you can you will be running closely upon the American $3 50 a day rate. But it is common and a little humiliating, to have to get meals, for economy's sake, outside the hostelry where you are putting up; and yet, if you take them at these cheap English hotels, look at the cost. Seventy-five cents for tea and if you take the Seventy-five cents for breakfast, $1.25 for dinner, 50 cents for tea, and if you take the regulation "fourth" meal, be it lunch or supper, about 75 cents more; which foots up for the day, including room, a hotel rate of something over $5. That's how cheap living is in England—it you put up at a fairly good hotel.

Many People Must Patronize Hotels. To weaken the force of these observations it may be said that the ordinary run of peo-ple do not trouble hotels, and that those who do patronize them can afford to pay well for their entertainment. Which may be quite true, but business men and those who travel, whether in Englann or Amerwho travel, whether in Englann or America, are compelled to patronize such places. Not only, therefore, may we properly bring them into account when the cost of living is under treatment, but they may surely be held, in the scale of charges they maintain, to express in some measure the current value of at least the comforts and luxuries of life, if not of its ordinary necessaries.

As to railway travel, here the case is much stronger, for the poor man has to use the train as well as the rich. He does not travel so much as his fellow-toiler in America, because he cannot afford to do so. He ica, because he cannot afford to do so. He would probably travel more, and, in consequence, know more and enjoy more, if his wages were better, and he might do it even with his wages at their present standard if conveniences and concessions were afforded him in railway travel such as would put him on a level in such matters with the workman in the United States.

But clothing, we are assured, is surpris-

But clothing, we are assured, is surprisingly low in price. The common idea is that you can get it for about one-half what it costs in the United States. This, however, is another fallacy. If such clothing as is worn by workmen at their daily toil, and such as the laboring classes are content to wear on Sundays and holidays, can be purchased any cheaper in London than in Chicago or New York, we have yet to see the adver-tisement of any responsible English shop-keeper which demonstrates this fact.

goods and workmanship in the clothing line prices in the two countries are about equal. And in higher grades the situation is something like this: The same goods which, when cut in the American style, and fitted with American exactness, and finished according to the American quality of well-paid workmanship, would cost you in the land of the Stars and Stripes about $45, you can get put together and hung on your back here for say $25. But for the $20 you may have saved in money you will pay awfully dear in the sacrifice of comfort.

We write feelingly on this point, repeated experiments in cheap English clothing having fully convinced us that garments which come at so low a price are never properly ing fully convinced us that garments which come at so low a price are never properly made, that they never fit, and never give satisfaction. Nevertheless, you can get a good suit of clothes here—quite as good as any you can get in America. The only thing that, to do this, you must go to some fashionable, high-priced tailor—a man who keeps good hands and pays fair wages. Here you will find yourself quite well suited in both the literal and figurative sense. You will find, too, that the cost will be, if anything, a little more than your tailor in New York would have charged.

It would be ungenerous, after saying all

It would be ungenerous, after saying all this, not to make an admission favorable to the other side of the question. We do it cheerfully. We admit that in rents the Englishman has a decided advantage over

House Rents Cheaper in England. He can get shelter cheaper than we can, as a rule, though not in all cases. It would be awful indeed if he could not, considering how much worse off he is at the week's end in wages. But against this advantage we may well instance with a very pardona-ble sensation of pride, the large proportion of American workmen who are above the necessity of paying rent, from the fact that they have become their own landlords.

These solemn London dailies in their comments upon the report of the British Consul at Chicago, are telling their fellow which for clearly the restrictions of the services of the services. Consul at Chicago, are telling their fellow subjects, for election purposes, that working men seem to be "in no better condition to save money in the United States than in England." It takes all they get, and more than they are able to get, they assure us, to clothe and feed their families respectably, because prices are so high. When, however, they inform us incidentally, in the same connection, that, on the testimony of their own representatives in that territory, something like one-half of the wage carners within the consular district of the Middle West, are living in their own houses, they give away the whole case. This is letting the cat out of the bag with a vengeance.

But people in both countries need something more than clothing and shelter.

"Home is more than four square walls,

"Home is more than four square walls, It needs something to endear it.

In America the ordinary workman thinks that home, to be a real home, should have a carpet on the floor, and, perchance, a musical instrument in the parlor. American Workingmen Live Better.

And if the cost of things is so much less here than in the United States, or, in other words, if English wages have the same buying power in England as American wages have in America, why is it that the homes of English workmen are not brightened generally in the same way? The American workmen likes meat, and, as a rule, he eats it from two to three times a day. He gets it, too, in most sections of the country at trifling cost.

With spring chickens obtainable at 25 cents each, and a good, big fowl for roasting or boiling at from 30 to 40 cents, he can occasionally treat himself to even such a luxury as that. But here meat is meat and chickens fly too high altogether to ever sit, except on the very rarest occasions, on the table of the working man. If you can pick up a fowl here for 65 cents, you are lucky indeed. You will generally find them roosting in the market, the few that are available—at about the altitude of from 80 cents to $1 25. Here is another instance of the dirt cheapness, so to speak, of living in

Of course they tell us here that working or course they tell us here that working people do not need such delicacles as these. If they do not, it is well they do not. We are told indeed that they do not need much meat of any kind, and here again are congratulations in order, for how on earth could they get much, if they needed it ever a hadly. so badly. For our own table, we are paying on the outskirts of London, 22 cents a pound for only a fairly good roast of beef. For steaks we pay 24 cents, and for the best

A Case Directly in Point. Recently, in a market town about 50 miles from London, we put down $2 for a leg of mutton weighing nine pounds, and when you consider that to thousands of agricultural laborers living in the vicinity of that market town, the $2 we were assessed for only enough meat to last a medium-sized family a couple of days, represents two-thirds of a week's income, you will get some idea both of what wages are in this country and of the utter fallacy of the proposition, so strenuously contended for over here just at this time, that the English workman is as well off relatively as the workman in the United States. Such an idea is all moonhine.* To be sure the English workman manages to live much cheaper than the American. He is compelled to do this because his earnings are so much smaller. He does it, however, not because prices are lower, but rather as the result of the economy he is forced to practice, and the privations to which he subjects himself in the heroic ef fort to cut his coat according to the small measure of cloth doled out to him.

THE DALTONS' LATEST.

Two of the Gang Hold Up a Woman Cashler in an Oktahoma Bank-They Make Away With $10,500-Citizens With Guns and Ropes in Pursuit

ELENO, O. T., July 27.—Eleno was thrown into a fever of excitementat 10 this morning by screams of help coming from the Bank of Eleno. The screams were from Mrs. S. W. Sawyer, wife of the President of the bank, who had just been held un by two robbers, who had also robbed the bank of $10,500. At 10:30 a stranger entered the bank, stepped up to the cashier's window and made inquiry about some town lots. Then he stepped to a desk and commenced writing. In a moment another stranger stepped to the cashier's desk, and, presenting a gun at Mrs. Sawyer's head, de-manded that she hand out all the money in the bank. She stepped to the vault and handed him all the packages of bills in the vault safe, and what was in the daily vault safe, and what was in the daily change drawer, aggregating about $10,500. The man who was writing at the desk seized the money as Mrs. Sawyer handed it through the wicket and disappeared out the door. The one holding the gun followed quickly. Mrs. Sawyer screamed several times and fell over in a swoon. The robbers mounted horses and rode away. Mrs. Sawyer was the only nerson in the hank Sawyer was the only person in the bank, the President, her husband, being absent in Oklahoma City. He arrived at home about 30 minutes after the robbery. The robbery is believed to be the work of the Daltons, n account of the manner of its execution. Hundreds of citizens on horseback and in buggies, with ropes and fully armed, are in pursuit. The robbers had only about 15 minutes' start. They were well mounted and armed to the teeth. They headed for the Dalton rendezvous in the Granite mountains in the Wichita reservation.

BRIGHT, WITTY MEN.

MANY ATTRIBUTES IN COMMON.

Both Are of One Religion and the Same Type of Citizenship.

THEY WORK WITHOUT GLORY OR PROFIT

Of course the religious preferences of candidates and campaigners have nothing to do with polities, yet politicians will talk about them. It is not strange, therefore, that in the closkrooms of the Senate and House, as well as in other places where politicians congregate, there should have been a great deal of comment during the past week on the fact that the two leading candidates for the Presidency, both adherents of the Presbyterian Church, and one of them a ruling elder in it, should each have selected or approved a Roman Catholic, and a Roman Catholic of Irish descent at that, for Chairman of the National Committee which is to conduct the campaign.

Some of the older Senators and Representatives who still bear the scars of the terrible fights in the old Knownothing days are disposed to believe that the millennium is not far off, as they think of Thomas Henry Carter managing the Republican National Committee's work and William Francis Harrity managing the Democratic National Committee's work, with the cer-tainty that there will be no allusions to "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion." Carter and Harrity as Specimens.

Both Carter and Harrity, by the way, are excellent specimens of that fine type of our citizens—the Irishman born in America.

They have both the best qualities of the Celtic character, and in addition some of the best traits of "Young America." In personal appearance, says a Washington correspondent of the Boston Herald, they are more like Americans than Irishmen. Either would be taken for a Yankee in any part of New England without his eyeglasses, and, as all the world knows, Chair-man Carter looks more like the pictoral "Brother Jonathan" than the orig-inal Brother Jonathan Trumbull himself. Both Chairman Carter and Chairman Harrity are full of wit and humor, coming honestly by them from their forbears. Both are such thorough business men that when they have business on hand the casual observer might not think they had any fun in them, Chairman Carter particularly having a very solemn appearance, suchas we usually associate with the judge on the bench, and which has been very useful to him in concealing the fact that he is only in the 30's yet, but when he has time, and especially when he gets away from his desk, he is funny, meaning thereby as entertaining as any man I know.

No guest at the dinners of the Gridiron Club last winter was wittier than Chairman Carter, and when I have said that I have said everything that could be said on that score, for all the wits of Washington were there at one time or another. humor steals quietly out, sometimes even when he is talking business, as when he said the other day in discussing what house should be taken for the National Committee in New York to Sergeant at Arms Swords, who was to engage it, that he must be sure that there wasn't "a dead Indian under the house" before taking it, alluding to the belief of the gamblers in Helena that bad luck resides in houses built over Indian graves. Harrity Hus a Modest Wit,

Chairman Harrity's wit is more modestly kept than Chairman Carter's, but it flashes out every now and then in delightful fashion. I know of nothing in recent repartee better than his reply to Lieutenant Governor Sheehan when the latter came to him at Chicago the Sunday before the convention met, and when it was still possible to nominate somebody else beside ex-President Cleveland, and said to him in his most insinuating manner: "Mr. Harrity, what would Pennsylvania do if New York should coat her 72 yotes on the first ballot for Goveast her 72 votes on the first ballot for Gov ernor Pattison of Pennsylvania?" "Gov-ernor," replied Harrity at once, in his low, distinct tones, and with a slight smile on his face, "Pennsylvania would return the compliment" by casting her 64 votes for Grover Cleveland of New York."

To be fully appreciated this remark ought to be framed in the circumstances which made it as wise as it was witty, and as courageous as it was either. The Cleveland movement really turned on the Pennsylvania delegation, which, with its 64 votes, almost counterbalanced the 72 votes of the New York delegation. The Pennsylnania delegation was for Cleveland if he co nominated upon the first or second ballots, but two-thirds of the delegation were personal friends of Governor Pattison, who, it their choice had been absolutely free, would personally have preferred his nomination to that of Cleveland.

No Salary in the Position.

These men had made it thoroughly well understood in Chicago that if Cleveland was not nominated on the second ballot, on the third ballot they would take the delega tion's 64 votes to Pattison. Of course Shee han knew all this (and Harrity knew tha he knew it) when he went to Harrity to try to persuade him to do on the first ballot what he would have to do on the third. If Harrity had faltered or pattered in that one-minute interview Cleveland might not have een nominated.

The popular impression that the Chair-men of the party National Committees get large salaries is all a mistake. They get no salaries at all. Senator Quay said to me the other day in speaking of this: "I wish it bad been true, as was reported in Pennsylvania, that I got a salary of $40,000 a year as Chairman of the Republican National Committee. If I had I don't believe I would have resigned, but, as a matter of fact, I never got a dollar of salary, and neither did any other Chairman of any National Committee. Why, no Chairman ever had his necessary expenses paid until I insisted that mine must be paid. Instead of getting a salary the Chairman of the National Committee usually has to put his hand down in his own pocket at the end of the campaign to pay debts of the committee."

Senator Quay, like Senator Brice, thinks there is neither glory nor profit in National Committee Chairmanships, and that all that the Chairman of a National Committee is sure of is the ingratitude of the candi dates and the party, whether he is successful Nevertheless men will always be found, even though, as in the Republicans' case this time, the search be a long one, who will take the place for whatever power and prominence there is in it, and take the chances on getting something more. It is true there is, of course, no provision in the Constitution of the United States or in the Revised Statutes or in any of the rules or regulations of the Civil Service Commission which forbids a poor man, like Chair-man Carter for example, who has no private fortune, from taking gitts for his sup-port from the wealthy faithful of the party during the arduous months of the campaign when it is impossible for him to give any appreciable time to his private-affairs.

SEVENTEEN YEARS ASLEEP.

Minnesota Has a Rip Van Winkle Who Puzzles the Physicians-He Remains Awake Two Weeks a Year, and siumbers the Rest of the Time.

QUINCY, MINN., July 27.-Minnesota's modern Rip Van Winkle, Mr. Herman Harms, who has slept almost incessantly for the past 17 years, has once more started out of his sleep His case is most phenomenal, and is attracting more attention from day to day.

Within the past year he has been visited by several prominent physicians for the ob-ject of medical enlightenment. It is now about one year since he was last awake, at which time he remained awake for a period of two weeks, taking the normal amount of sleep.

Mr. Harms is now living on the Bugmann farm, one mile and a half east of this place. He moved here about three years go from near Utica, this State. Some seven years since, when Mr. Harms was residing in Illinois, he was attacked by a severe fever and had intense pains in his head. After the febrile symptoms had passed away this sleeplesaness came upon him.

Cold Climate Had No Effect.

His physicians advised him to try living in a colder climate, whereupon he moved to Minnesota. This was in 1878. During his stay in Illinois he did not sleep continuously but since coming to this State he has slept all of the time, with the exception of 18 months beginning with 1881, two months in 1889 and two weeks last July.

While he is sleeping he can only be aroused by his wife touching him gently on his head. Calling or shaking him will not arouse him in the least. In this particular his is a strikingly strange case. He takes no nourishment at all to speak of, but when he does eat it is always in the night. The past year he has become terribly emaciated and seems to have aged greatly indeed.

Mr. Harms was born in Germany in the year 1838. In 1863 he was married to Misa Lydia Buzmann. Five children have been born to them, the last one in 1891. All the children appear to be as bright as the aver-His Boy Has Melancholia.

The eldest boy, Willie, was a victim to melancholia, and in the year 1882 at the age of only 12 years, committed suicide by hanging himself to the plow-handle while in the field plowing. This affliction falling upon the poor wife and mother prostrated her. Only a few days past she told your correspondent that she could bear with the care of her husband, but when her son's name was mentioned she broke completely down.

During all these years of her husband's torpidity she has zealously guarded him and has labored with Christian resignation and fortitude.

The family is in almost destitute circum-The family is in almost destitute circumstances. Last summer a representative of a well-known circus called on Mrs. Harms and offered to give her $150 per month and expenses of the family if they would travel with his circus. But she would not listen to the proposition. She has also received several similar offers from numerous museum managements of Chicago and other larger cities. Mr. Harm's case has thus far baffled the skill of the best physicians, and it is one which presents a vast field for it is one which presents a vast field for medical research.

THE personal discomfort, and the worry of a constant cough, and the soreness of lungs and throat which usually attend it, are all remedied by Dr. D. Jayne's Expectorant, a safe remedy for pulmonary disorders and throat affections. A NEW FACTOR IN POLITICS.

SMOKED FOR OVER TWENTY-FIVE YEARS.

Has been popular with smokers everywhere for over twenty-five years. It is Just as Good Now as Ever.

Its FLAVOR, FRAGRANCE and PURITY have contributed largely to the growing popularity which pipe smoking enjoys. Pipe smoking is growing in favor because finer, sweeter and better tobacco can be had in this form and at much less cost than in cigars. BLACKWELL'S DURHAM TOBACCO CO., DURHAM, N. C.
